Q/A: What is an Enrolled Agent?

Q

What is an Enrolled Agent?

A

Although it might sound like it, an Enrolled Agent is not an agent of the Internal Revenue Service. Rather, an Enrolled Agent is an individual who has earned the privilege of representing tax payers before the IRS.

Enrolled Agents must pass a three-part IRS test, which demonstrates the necessary level of knowledge and expertise required to resolve problems on behalf of a taxpayer.

The IRS also applies strict ethical standards when giving individuals the privilege to represent taxpayers in negotiations. Enrolled Agent status is the highest credential the IRS awards. To stay ahead of the game, Enrolled Agents have to continue their education each year to stay updated on the new IRS rules and regulations.

Why is it important to hire an Enrolled Agent to resolve your tax debt?

When it comes to seeking help to resolve tax debt, most people assume they need to find a tax attorney. They are federally licensed tax practitioners with specific knowledge about the IRS tax code. You can, of course, negotiate with the IRS to resolve your tax liability yourself, or you can give permission to discuss your IRS case to anybody you know. You can also hire any attorney or CPA to resolve your tax debt. The problem is that your representative may not know all the appropriate rules and regulations of the tax code. In some cases, they might even make your tax debt situation more difficult to resolve.

But Enrolled Agents specialize in knowing the current tax law, policies and procedures. Ideally, the Enrolled Agent you choose to negotiate on your behalf should be someone that specializes in tax debt.
